Patent Law Firm to Present Seminar at NY Society of Professional Inventors

Inventors to learn when to use and how to choose a patent attorney

Garden City, NY -- Scully, Scott, Murphy & Presser, a leading Intellectual Property (IP) law firm, has announced that two of its attorneys will be making a presentation on patents at the 8:00 PM March 24th meeting of the NY Society of Professional Inventors at Farmingdale State University. Philip Braginsky will present expert advice on when to use and how to choose a patent attorney, including the pros and cons of using a patent attorney during the various phases of commercializing an invention. David Torrente will present details on the patent examination procedures that are used at the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office.

"This speaking engagement allows us to share our expertise with local inventors," said Paul Esatto, Senior Partner at Scully, Scott, Murphy & Presser. "Many of them have a general understanding of the patent process, but need to learn more about the specifics to adequately protect their inventions."

"Inventors are often solicited by search services, "patent-it-yourself" services, and invention marketing companies," said Philip Braginsky, patent attorney at Scully Scott. "They frequently need clarification on which parts of protecting their invention are best handled by a patent attorney."

About NY Society of Professional Inventors

NYSPI is an organization for inventors that facilitates give-and-take networking among its members, and invites speakers to present on topics of mutual interest. It provides a forum for the interaction of people who understand the unique language and problems of an inventor. NYSPI is the only non-profit inventor organization of its kind in the Metro New York area.
